ORIGIN

1. A brief skirmish between Soviet and Chinese Nationalist troops took place at Changtjenhokou (124-50, 40-22) on the Manchurian-Korean border on 4 March. One Chinese soldier and one Soviet soldier were killed. Soviet troops first fired on Chinese troops from the Korean side of the Yalu River; then one Soviet soldier advanced across the boundry into Manchurian territory, where he was subsequently fired upon and killed.
2. Local unit commanders of the Soviet and Chinese forces later met at Changtjenhokou and discussed the incident. The Soviet unit commander proved to be not "unreasonable". No further action is planned by Chinese Army authorities at this time.
